ABSTRACT

A telephone survey of State information agencies to determine the type of information services they provide resulted in a guide intended for use by user services personnel in referring requestors to specific information resources in a given State. In assessing the status of information resources and services in each of the 50 States, Puerto Rico, the District of Columbia, and American Samoa, the author identifies the names and addresses of selected State information dissemination agencies, lists the locations and comprehensiveness of ERIC microfiche collections, cites whether or not manual and/or computer searches of the ERIC document base are provided, determines the availability of microfiche readers and related equipment, and specifies the accessibility to the public of each agency's library collection. The States are listed alphabetically. (AG)

FOREWORD

Increasing demand for information by vocational and technical educators emphasizes the important role of state information dissemination agencies in providing the interpersonal linkage between information collections and users. It is important that vocational and technical educators have access to their state information agency and are aware of the services it can provide.

The Center has cooperated with state research coordination units (RCU's) for several years in a series of activities aimed at stimulating the development of state information dissemination systems for vocational and technical education. Following a conference in 1967, an ad hoc committee of RCU personnel worked with Center staff to develop a Guide for State Vocational-Technical Education Information Dissemination Systems. Seven RCU's cooperated in a study of over 3,200 information users, and in planning and conducting two training workshops for information specialists. Concurrently, many RCU's were developing information resources and the capacity to serve the needs of information users. To assess the status of information resources and services in each state, the data contained within this report were collected. It is hoped that the compilation will prove useful to RCU directors and others in extending and refining resources and services. The data affirm the excellent service being rendered by a majority of RCU's.

This second edition of the Guide to State Information Resources identifies the names and addresses of selected state information dissemination agencies, lists the locations of ERIC microfiche collections, as well as the availability of computer software installations for searching ERIC files in each state. Individual information resources profiles should be valuable to users seeking sources of information on vocational and technical education within their state.

This report was prepared by David H. Miller, User Services, The Center for Vocational and Technical Education. Special recognition is given to the directors and staff of the state information dissemination agencies for their willing cooperation.

Guide to State Information Resources

One of the essential components of an information system is a mechanism for moving contact and services as close to the user as possible. The Center for Vocational and Technical Education and its affiliated ERIC Clearinghouse on Vocational and Technical Education provide service upon request to users in two ways within the framework of The Center's User Services Unit: by means of direct response (telephone, letter, in-person) and by referral of requests to agencies that can best serve the requestors' needs.

State Research Coordinating Units for Vocational and Technical Education (RCU's) and the ERIC Clearinghouse on Vocational and Technical Education have cooperated in providing ERIC users with access to both general and specific types of information to solve their problems.

Cooperation Between VT-ERIC and RCU's in Providing User Services

Personnel at The Center have, in the past, solicited the assistance of RCU's or other state information dissemination agencies in responding to requests that required one or more of the following: in-depth follow-up to formulate a search strategy, information on availability of data not readily identifiable through ERIC, information on accessibility to state and local collections of ERIC microfiche and duplication services.

Development of Information Resource Profiles

In order to make the referral of requests to state information agencies more realistic, a telephone survey of agencies was conducted to ascertain the information services provided by these agencies. The results of this telephone survey, along with a listing by state of computer software installations and ERIC microfiche collections, were compiled to form a Guide to State Information Resources. The Guide is intended for use by user services personnel in referring requestors to specific information resources in a given state. When this procedure is followed, only the profile for a single state is used. State information dissemination personnel can use the compilation of profiles for comparison purposes and to gain insight into the different approaches taken by various states in providing information services to users. These agencies can also disseminate copies of their state's profile to information requestors within their state.

Survey of State Information Agencies

The survey solicited data regarding the comprehensiveness of each agency's ERIC microfiche collection, whether or not manual and/or computer searches of the ERIC document base were provided, the availability of microfiche readers and related equipment and accessibility to the public of each agency's library collection. The following table reflects the numbers and percentages of the 50 state agencies (plus Puerto Rico, the District of Columbia, and American Soma) that provide these eight specific information services.

Note: A "manual search" may mean the agency will search the collection for the client or it may simply imply that indices are available for client usage. Also, not all ERIC microfiche collections include all earlier documents. Where there is any doubt about manual searching services or the extent of a given collection, it is advisable to make inquiries in advance of a visit.
